This year's 74-strong cohort (including joint entries) is up from 70 last year.

Profiles by Justin Cash, Paul Clarke, Clare Dickinson, Zoe Hu, Xhulio Ismalaj, Bilal Jafar, Adam Mawardi, Lars Mucklejohn and David Ricketts

The following has been excerpted

Most influential

Adam Tejpaul

Chief executive

JPMorgan international private bank

NEW ENTRY - Adam Tejpaul is a one-firm man, having spent all 28 years of his post-university career at JPMorgan. He started out on the private bank analyst programme, and has since plied his trade in London, Geneva and Hong Kong, working on both client relationships and risk management.

As CEO of JPMorgan international private bank, Tejpaul has expanded his mandate, overseeing a franchise that spans Asia-Pacific, Europe, Middle East, Africa and Latin America. He also looks after the global families group, which serves US families living abroad and international families with business and personal interests in the United States.

When he's not cycling, swimming or horseback riding, the London-based leader is focused on upgrading the international private bank's traditional service model to a more digitally-enabled experience.

The division is using technology to help clients visualise choices, receive reports with a single click and engage more actively in decisions.
