Managing Wealth with Trust and Relationship

Domenica D'Anna has always had an intense fascination for the finance world.

She started investing at age 18. It was a passion that eventually led her to write for Forbes Finance Council, and today she's trusted by clients who are managing $5 million to $25 million and beyond in net worth.

As one of the only wealth management firms of its kind throughout Las Vegas, J.P. Morgan Private Bank manages the complex needs of high-net worth clients, and it offers holistic management to address the multiple layers of their clients' financial picture.

"Our clients are often managing complex estates, seeking financing for a large purchase, or establishing a foundation for the first time," says Domenica.

One of the greatest assets of the Private Bank, says Domenica, is that clients have access to the entire Firm's resources, and while her team spends much time managing their clients' portfolios, they also help clients examine the other pieces of their lives and businesses that may be affecting short- and long-term financial goals.

"Clients are here because they know success, and they want to grow what they have," says Domenica. "They seek us out for our knowledge and expertise, but as our relationships grow, they also rely on us for our advice. It's humbling that they choose us to help them live financially healthy, happy lifestyles."
